The 'OSCE Circuits' Course

Teale Fenning's unique approach has consistently helped at least twice as many delegates pass the written part of the MRCOG Part 2 Exam than comparable courses. This new Practical OSCE Course has been devised using similar techniques and is designed to maximise your score through simple, logical approaches.

This course compliments the Theoretical OSCE Course and provides you with an opportunity to put the Teale Fenning advice into practice. Our four intensive sessions each offer a specific and different full 12 station circuit with immediate, personal feedback and technique-enhancing, marking schemes.

Two sessions examine the key areas in general obstetrics and gynaecology through a variety of interactive, role-playing questions including 'demanding patient' and 'breaking bad news' scenarios.

One session is dedicated to the preparatory questions and offers 6 stations that explore subjects such as audit, prioritisation, risk management, statistical evaluation of tests and assessment of clinical papers and patient information leaflets.

The remaining session concentrates on practical obstetrics and gynaecology including result interpretation, surgical procedures, intrapartum care and emergency protocols and drills. You are given the questions and related marking schemes for all of the sessions and are encouraged to mark your fellow candidates.

We restrict the numbers to ensure you have a fair opportunity to be actively involved. First refusal is offered to delegates attending the preceding Theoretical OSCE Course. A personal CV is required as we divide the four groups according to clinical experience and exposure to enhance the learning experience.
