

Teale Fenning Medical Education

The EMCQ Course

The EMCQ Course, the most recent introduction to our training portfolio, represents a combination of three of our old Courses: the MCQ Past Paper Course, O&G in 48 Hours, and EMQ Solutions. We decided to bring these altogether as the ultimate short course in evidence-based Obstetrics and Gynaecology. The weekend is designed to enhance your knowledge, identify areas that require further, directed learning, and to facilitate your retention of information which, after all, is the key to success.

We cover all ten RCOG published MCQ papers concentrating on the more controversial areas and those that require specific consideration and scientific explanation. We also supply you with lists of basic facts that simply have to be learnt such as genetic inheritances, disease staging classifications, drug interactions and so on. Approximately 30-40% of the questions are repeated with no, or only subtle, changes. This also means that you will not have seen 60-70% of the questions in your exam! Our job is to predict these for you and ensure you understand the background to the question and not just the correct answer.

In contrast to MCQs, which rely totally on knowledge, EMQs relate more to the clinical setting and are usually based on result interpretation and decision making. EMQs should be easier therefore as they test your clinical knowledge. They have more similarities to the Short Answer Essays than the MCQ paper and there are certain strategies that you can use to approach an EMQ which you will be shown and taught.

The EMCQ Course offers practical experience of a wide range of EMQs and MCQs that collectively explore each and every core topic in Obstetrics & Gynaecology. Sample questions and mock exams are provided in the course booklet which will prove to be a useful revision aid in the final weeks before the Exam.

This course is invaluable to all delegates, therefore, and an excellent opportunity to gain insight into the level of information that you are expected to know for the Part 2 Examination. It should prove an invaluable experience and provides a unique learning opportunity typical of the Teale Fenning teaching mentality.

Price £350